Remarks

In September 1894 Stieglitz wrote: "The Ross-Zeiss lens attached to the large camera I use does excellent work; for example, on a rainy day using stop f/12 on a Lumière plate I took a picture in 1/5 of a second of some black goats distant from the camera, 15 feet, which developed, fully exposed” (The American Amateur Photographer 6 [September 1894], 432).

In the 1895 London Photographic Salon, Stieglitz exhibited a photograph titled Along the Seine, which was praised by George Davison for its “decorative effect” (see The American Amateur Photographer 7 [November 1895], 491). The title A Decorative Panel may derive from this description.
